Finding Love During the Holidays

Gearing up to celebrate the holidays can be an exciting time, but for those without a significant other it can mean a rush to find a date for their upcoming parties and events. Online dating is often seen as the quick fix but as caution is thrown to the wind, the results can be disastrous.

The Dangers of Online Dating

There is minimal background checking involved when signing up for dating websites, especially the free ones, making it an easy option for predators to meet their unsuspecting victims. This often involves lying on their online dating profile, although predators aren't the only ones guilty of this. Many profiles contain lies that range from an innocent few inches added to someone's height to the risk of the profile belonging to a completely different person. This is often where scammers come in. Many have also taken to dating sites as a platform for defrauding individuals by developing a "relationship" with the victim with the goal of finding a way to have money sent to them overseas.

How to Protect Yourself

If a dating profile only consists of one photo and/or they don't show they're face clearly or at all, be cautious as this may be a fake profile. Never give out your personal information such as your address, last name, or financial information and don't rush into meeting someone that you're not 100% comfortable with. Always bear in mind that the other person is a stranger. Take your time to really get to know someone and ensure he or she is who they say they are. When you do meet, pick a public place during a busy lunch time or dinner rush so help is nearby if necessary.

The best preventative approach is to know as much as you can about the individual you are intending to meet or date. This is where BCSI can help. Our due diligence system will provide you with a report of the individual you are looking to get to know better and therefore guarantee a more secure meeting.
