Modern Times

In modern times, you must be careful how you interact with people online or offline. Scammers are likely to try and manipulate you into giving up personal details or scamming you out of your money. One of the scams they have begun to utilize is the "Cell Phone Delivery Scam."

"The Cell Phone Delivery Scam"

First, the scammer will use your personal details and charge your account to order the phone. Then the phone will be delivered to your address if the scammer doesn't intercept the package. Once you receive the package you didn't order, someone will come back posing as a delivery person and ask that you return the package. Once you give back the phone, the scammer will take it and leave you to pay for it.

BCSI Investigations Inc. is the platinum standard for private investigations.

Be Cautious

If you receive a package you didn't order, be careful, and if someone comes back to retrieve it, you can refuse to give it back until the issue is resolved or until the police are involved. You could also contact the retailer and have the package returned.

This scam is extremely advanced and is becoming a more common fraud technique. Be cautious about whom you trust with personal details, and if you've been the victim of this type of scam, contact BCSI Investigations for a free consultation.

If you or anyone you know has been a victim of fraud, contact BCSI Investigations for a consultation with one of our seasoned private investigators or our in-house digital forensics specialists.
